Tales of Adventure

A Tiny Perspective 1:32

I heard an NPR commentator describing her experience of sitting next to a little girl on her first plane ride. It was delightful – and now I enjoy sharing it with my listeners.

Leap and Laugh! 19:48

This adventure in New Zealand was thrilling! It took me 'out of my ordinary' and in many ways, changed my life. And in case you are curious, every bit of this story is true – and factual!

The Well of True Water 13:44

This traditional tale was being told in the time of Shakespeare. My version is inspired by a Scottish story, "Iron Heinrich" from the Brother Grimm's and Joseph Jacobs' "English Fairy Tales."

Dorky Spandex vs Macho Leather 9:06

My husband, Phil is a source of much joy – as well as many stories! I appreciate his willingness to laugh at himself and his encouragement for me to tell his tales to the world. This adventure unfolds as he bicycled up the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Dog, She is Smart! 6:27

My original story was sparked by joke that was floating around not too long ago. It cracked me up so I thought it deserved its own story with a 'southern dog!'

11,233 Miles in a Kayak 6:08

Another true story but you'll get no hints from me in this description!

She's Busy 1:15

This was my Mom's favorite little story. And telling it is a way to bring her on stage with me.

I have to give myself credit for snapping the cover photo while soaring above Queenstown, New Zealand.

And thanks to every single audience member whose listening, laughter and engagement gave life to this recording! Wow!
